“ She was my mom... not my grandma but my mom... she raised me to be who I am today and I'm so thankful for her I love you so much momma even tho your not here physically I know you are here spiritually... you told me the night after you passed that you was here it may have scared the crap out of me but I feel better knowing your still here... I'm so glad you walked me down the red carpet at prom❤️❤️ Again I love you so much

“ i met this sweet angel last year. she became the one i called “nana”. she welcomed me into her home. i remember prom with her. nana was so excited to see us girls all dressed up and ready to go. nana took us all to prom and even was apart of it. she became my best friend. and the time spent with her was all the time i needed to know she was my sweet nana. not just my neighbor. i love her so so much.

“ I never got to meet her in person ( I really wish I had had the chance to ) but I remember the first time we had talked on the phone. I am married to Jeremy’s birth father and she wanted to talk to me bout my feelings about my husband being in touch with Jeremy and I told her I would love him as I love my own children and we became friends and family all in one conversation. She was a special lady and the more we talked the more I respected her as a person and as Jeremy’s Mother. In the past years I was dealing with health issues and our contact with each other was not as often. The news of her death makes me wish I had not been so self Absorbed and had made more time to call her. My love and prayers go out to her family. May God comfort you in your time of grief. God gained a beautiful angel.
