“ Hello everyone my name is Patrick Kelsey. Mr. Miller was my 5th grade social studies/history teacher at Northside elementary. He was a very big influence in my adolescence and one of the most memorable teacher i think i have ever had. Ill never forget the way he taught us and how he always made it fun and interactive. He had so many stories of his travels around the world (him and his family)ill also never forget his sincerity and the deep empathy he had for people of color and their struggles in society during the civil rights movement and so forth in our country. So much so he would literally be teaching in tears at points. I hate that i never got the chance to thank him for his teachings that still live with me today.

“ Pete &I went to Chilies one night I complimented the woman on the other side of the divider come to find out the conversation she was the school teacher whoa that's all it took for Pete they just started talking and they both have the love of teaching we finally left but he got so excited about another teacher definitely had the love for the students and he was so educated so many degrees it was sad he had already had a stroke It was hard for him to find his worms that to the point where it was impossible for him to find his words you had to help him with this conversation if you knew what he was talking about it was a very enlightening dinner with him But most of all learn how much in love teaching love the student work and how many degrees he did have I was helping my daughter and Alex move and he had probably five get graduation gowns

“ Mr. Miller was such a great and memorable teacher to so many young people. I feel very fortunate to have been in class. It was so fun. I have thought of him often over the years, and wondered where he is or what he's doing. It's kinda wild that I'm now older than he was when he was my teacher (Miller's Killers, Class of '91). He's a legend. Rest in Peace and prayers for his family.
